

CALL FOR PRESENTATIONS

The Nevada Geographic Information Society is excited to continue its thirty-two-year tradition of offering a great event for networking, education, and innovation. Your geospatial community gathers at Mapping Together October 11 and 12, 2023 at the Reno Sparks Convention Center.

NGIS 2023 is for education, professional development, and information sharing for anyone with an interest in GIS and geospatial data. Representatives from government agencies, businesses, and academic institutions throughout Nevada and the Southwest are expected to attend NGIS 2023.

We want you to help build our community at Mapping Together by telling us about what you do! You don't have to be a "GIS professional" to present at this meeting. We are looking for presentations that show how geospatial data and approaches help us all by "mapping together".

Remember, too, that presenting at conferences is a great career-builder, including maintaining your GISP credentials.

Presentation Formats

20-minute individual presentations

Session proposals, consisting of several presentations that are on the same topic

Example Topics from Previous Conferences

Asset Management and GIS

ArcGIS Pro Tips, Tricks, and Experiences

ArcGIS Online

Emergency Management

Public Safety

Public Health

Biological Sciences

Conservation and Resource Management

Cultural Resources

Open-Source Software and Tools

GIS at Nevada Institutions of Higher Education

Geospatial Science and Research Studies

State/Local Government Applications

Here is a good general rule: if it involves a map, our community is interested in it!

Please note that sales presentations are not appropriate for NGIS sessions although we will evaluate and possibly accept real-world examples, especially when presented with the customer. Vendors are urged to demonstrate their products and discuss their services by exhibiting at the event.

Submitting a Presentation Proposal – Due by July 31, 2023

Submit a completed NGIS 2023 Presentation Proposal Form. Presenters must be registered for the conference.
